KOTA WOMEN WEAVERS

The weaving tradition of Kota Doria is an age-old tradition and was brought to Rajasthan by the Mughal army. This weave was initially known as Kota Masurias but is now popular by the name of Kota Doria.

The group 'Sidhika Self Help' comprises a collective of 20 women weavers from the Muslim-Ansari community in Kaithun town of Rajasthan, who is the reason this weave is surviving as a relic of the glorious legacy.

MUBARAKPUR WEAVES

Mubarakpur is an ancient handloom weaving cluster, with evidence of fine silk weaving taking us back all the way to the 14th century. The luxurious brocade weaves with zari motifs have historically been the highlight of this region.

Working out of Azamgarh district of Uttar Pradesh - the Burhani Self Help Group, Mubarakpur is represented by the brand Mubarakpur Weaves, an organisation comprising of 20 traditional silk weavers.

With the help and support of AIACA, new designs are developed in close coordination with professional designers. However, working on a 40 chowk jacquard loom brings in design limitations but maintains traditions.

GAIA TREE BY PADMAJA SHRIVASTAVA

Based in Bhopal, Madhya Pradesh, the hub for Gond Paintings, Gaia Tree was established by Ms. Padmaja Shrivastava in the year 2012. The aim of the setup was to accelerate the economic development of tribal people in India by marketing their products and helping them retain their fast disappearing art and craft.

The Gond tribal community is one of central India's largest indigenous communities and their art is an expression of their everyday quest for life.

The Gond art resonates with the belief that 'viewing a good image begets good luck'. This inherent belief led the Gonds to decorate their houses and the floors with traditional tattoos and motifs.
